

Hydrant Flushing Information for Butler Water Customers

The Butler DPW flushes more than 300 fire hydrants twice annually. The process takes approximately 3 weeks to complete. Hydrant flushing is a critical program, allowing the DPW to do several things:

- Clean natural deposits from water mains
- Asses the condition of the Borough's water system and proactively determine where repairs or upgrades are needed
- Ensure that sufficient water is available for fire-fighting emergencies
- Ensure that we may continue to deliver the highest quality drinking water possible to our customers

Flushing involves flowing large quantities of water, which increases the velocity of the water in the pipe. When the DPW is flushing in your neighborhood, you may experience consequences such as low water pressure or discolored water. Your water pressure will return to normal once we progress past your neighborhood. Discolored water is safe to use, and typically clears up within an hour. If you experience discolored water, the following guidelines will help resolve the issue and minimize the inconvenience:

- Minimize your water usage until the discoloration clears. Minimizing your water usage on the day the DPW is flushing in your neighborhood may help avoid discolored water in the first place.
- DO NOT use your hot water until the water clears, as this will trap the discolored water in your hot water heater, and may require flushing your hot water heater.
- Discolored water may stain fabrics, avoid washing laundry until the water has cleared.
- Clean automatic ice makers and home filtration systems according to the manufacturer's instructions once the water has cleared.

Customers are encouraged to review the hydrant flushing schedule, posted at www.butlerborough.com, and take note of when flushing will occur in their neighborhood. Please note that the DPW makes every effort to adhere to the schedule as posted, however actual conditions may require adjustments. Flushing dates are subject to change, typically by one business day.

Your cooperation is appreciated while we complete this critical maintenance program. As always, please remember to drive carefully when you see our crews working in the road. Feel free to contact the Butler Department of Public Works with your questions or concerns at (973) 838-7200 ext. 410.
